2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

The claimed invention

The claimed invention relates to a method and an apparatus, for exchange of information in a communication network.

The following documents were cited in the International Search Report:

D1: WO 0105109 A1

D2: WO 0064110 A1

D3: WO 0154364 A1

D4: EP 869688 A2

D5: IEEE "An architecture for residential Internet telephony service" Huitema, C; et al IEEE Internet Computing May-June 1999 Vol 3, Issue 3

D6: EP 1041808 A2

D1 relates to a method and a system for exchanging information between multimedia network nodes. The networks may be PLMN, PSTN or ISDN networks that are interconnected. When subscribers want to set up multimedia sessions with other nodes or subscribers in the same or a different network, several actions are taken. It has to be decided if the nodes/subscribers reside in the same network or in different networks. The nodes nodes/subscribers involved in the multimedia session must exchange capabilities to make sure that both nodes are able to take part in the session. A control message is sent from the first node to the second node, the control message containing capabilities information, see page 8 line 1 - page 10 line 31. The session may then involve audio, moving colour video pictures and/or data. If the two nodes involved in the session are located in different networks and are interconnected via a third network, the voice, video, data is transported in TFO frames.

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of: Box V.

D1 does not state that the sequence of events for setting up the multimedia session is initiated by the detection of a triggering event. However, it is understood that a terminal by requesting such a session performs the triggering event. Consequently, the claimed invention as in claims 1-6, 9 and 10 is not considered to involve an inventive step.

D2 relates to a method for delivering messages in a communication network consisting of at least one terminal and a messaging functionality. When a message is received for a terminal by the messaging functionality, the messaging functionality sends a notification about the presence of the message to the terminal. The terminal decides due to its capabilities and current user profile how to handle the received message, replies to the notification instructing the messaging functionality how to handle the message. Consequently, the claimed invention as in claims 1, 2, 8 and 9 is not novel.

D3-D6 are considered to merely relate to the state of the art and are not commented on further.
